excerpt from narratives of sorcery and magic from the most authentic sources of the first half of the twelfth century relates from the information of one of his own acquaintances who assured him that he was an eye witness and whom William would have been ashamed to disbelieve no sooner had her unearthly master given the miserable woman warning that the hour had approached when he should take final possession than she called to her death bed her children and the monks of a neighboring monastery confessed her evil courses and her subjection to the devil and that they would at least secure her body from the hands of the fiends if she would in the hide of a stag then place me in a stone coffin and fasten in the covering lead and then upon this place another stone and chain the whole down with three heavy chains of iron let fifty psalms be sung each night and fifty masses be said by day to break the power of the omens if you can thus keep my body three nights on the fourth day you may securely bury it in the ground these directions were executed to the letter but psalms and masses were equally unavailable the first night the priests withstood the efforts of the fiends the second they became more clamorous the gates of the monastery were burst open in spite of the strength of the bolts and two of the chains which hold down the coffin were broken though the middle one held firm on the third night the clamor of the fiends increased till the monastery trembled from its foundations and the priests stiff with terror were unable to proceed with their service the door at length burst open of their own accord and a demon larger and more terrible than any of the others stalked into the church he stopped at the coffin and with a fearful voice ordered the woman to arise she answered that she was held down by the chain the demon put his foot to the coffin the last chain broke asunder like a bit of thread and the covering of the coffin flew off the body of the witch then arose and her persecutor took her by the hand and led her to the door where a black horse of gigantic stature its back covered with iron spikes awaited them and seating her beside him on its back he is appeared from the sight of the terrified monks but the horrible screams of his victims were heard through the country for miles as they passed along at this period the witches met together by night in solitary places to worship their master who appeared to them in the shape of a cat or a goat or sometimes in that of a man at these meetings as we are informed by John of Salisbury they had feasts and some were appointed to serve at table we about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks.com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works this historic book may have numerous typos and missing text purchasers can usually download a free scanned copy of the original book without typos from the publisher not indexed not illustrated 1851 edition excerpt 226 chapter xii the english magicians dr dee and his followers whatever may have been the means employed to produce the effects described at the end of the preceding chapter there must have been a great and general tendency to belief on the part of those to whom they were exhibited this credulity seems to have risen to its greatest height at the time of the reformation as though when the mind had been suddenly relieved from intellectual restraint it overleaped in the first burst of liberty every bound to which sober reason would naturally confine it when we see men of the greatest talents and the most profound learning shutting themselves in their secret studies to push their anxious researches beyond the limits of natural knowledge and hear them talking soberly of their intercourse with spirits of another world and with their rulers we are almost driven to believe that the world had been suddenly deluged with a host of demons who amused themselves with turning to mockery the intellectual powers of the human race nor perhaps was this mental infatuation entirely without its use for we must not forget that we owe some of our fundamental discoveries in science to the magicians of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries and that one of the most universally necessary articles of the present day our almanacks are derived from the astrologers there is something extraordinary in the rage for the study of what were called the occult sciences which manifested itself at the period of which we are speaking in our own country caius the founder of a college of learning in one of our universities dee one of the first mathematicians of his age and many of the wisest and best among their contemporaries gave implicit belief to the

David Rollo considers a series of texts produced in England and the Angevin Empire to reassess the value and nature of literacy in the High Middle Ages he does this by scrutinizing metaphors that represent writing as a form of sorcery or magic in Latin texts and in the work of the Old French writer Benoît de Sainte-Maure Rollo then examines the ambiguous representation of literacy as a skill that can be exploited as a commodity
